Amy Xueqiong Guo

W&M's Marshall Wythe School of Law Student

I was invited to a Bible Study every Friday by Sister Grace and Brother Eddie since the first day I arrived here. I was touched by their kindness at the very beginning, and benefited from the sharing of others in this group. Then I started my journey to God. I did not trust people, but now I am trying to treat it differently following His word. In the past, I did not believe love, but now I know there is love.

W&M's Marshall Wythe School of Law Student

It is HIM who gives me faith, who brought so many kind and lovely people and guided me, and who made me believe that HE is really there and watching us every minute, helping us and loving us in any possible way. I think, being a Christian is not a goal, but an approach to surrender. Being a Christian is not just simply helping each other, loving each other, but a mission to find out what love really means behind the behavior. Being a Christian is not a sign of anything, but a statement to the world that I am giving myself to GOD, and let HIM lead the way of my life.

Hui Tian

Ph.D. in Applied Science at W&M

(This Easter), my colleague asked me that what you decided to give up on this Palm Sunday. Even though I did not understand why she asked me this question, I said that (if I need to) first of all I will give up myself, not only for this Sunday and it should be always. And I pray for God and ask Him dwelling on my heart as His holy temple. He is love; He is sustainer, my shield, my comforter, my strength and my hope. Only through Him, I could be a daughter of Kingdom of Heaven.

William Liu

Undergraduate Student at Virginia Tech

God miraculously provided an unexpected circumstance at the Wintergreen Men's Retreat last fall where I was participated in looking for a lost boy at Wintergreen, VA. I remember of praying with the men for God to be his salvation and through His grace and it came to be. Shortly thereafter, I was able to sleep soundly and think about how I really need God's love, healing grace and forgiveness to open my heart. I have been praying to be formed in to a man of noble character, and as I encounter temptations and battles, I see now what it means to have character and how it can be developed. I have come to understand that Christ is my Savior and that I should believe in Him.

Hao Wu

W&M's Marshall Wythe School of Law Student

I believe God oversees everything. He knows me, He listens to me, and He blesses me in mysterious ways. I pray that my heart will always be humble before God, and never turns away. Thank God for opening my heart. All I can say is "Thank You, my Lord!" I also realized that getting baptized is not a decision impulse. It is an official testimony to the world that I offer myself to God.

Kaida Yang

Ph.D Candidate in Physics at W&M

I received the gospel through two Christians, after I came to study in the US. After studying the word of God, and salvation through Jesus Christ, I opened my heart and admitted my sin. I am most moved by John 3:16. It says to me that our salvation is by the love of God. Our Lord, Jesus Christ was born due to God's love for us, as the sacrifice of our sin. For all people, the first and most important step of faith, is stop believing in oneself, and believe Jesus is the Rock of eternal life.

Xiao Wang

W&M professor, teaching Chinese in the Department of Modern Language

My first experience with God was in 2002. I was studying for a MA degree in South Korea. I was overwhelmed by the frustration and the loneliness. It was a Sunday; I went to a church on campus and attended a worship service for the first time. As I was sitting on a bench in the back of the church, I offered my first infant prayer: "God, if you are there, please talk to me. If you can make them believe, make me believe too!" Soon after then, a students' Christian group reached out to me. I simply loved their company, and started one-on-one Bible study. I believe my becoming a Christian is a miracle. Yet, everything happened naturally. God was faithful to me. When I was in need, He simply prepared everything for me.
